HOPKINSVILLE, KENTUCKY, TUESDAY, AUGUST 31, 1897

NO. 684

We have recently purchased the Richards & Co. Shoe Stock, amounting to nearly $15,000 at a good liberal discount from factory cost. This stock is all fresh and new, the firm having been in the shoe business only one year, and is made up almost entirely of first-class custom made goods. This purchase certainly places us in a position to sell shoes for less than any concern who has paid regular prices for their goods, and

"Do you know that that dog of mine got me into a mees the other evening?" remarked Col. Jim Barnett, of Shadyshel plantation, the other day, "and came very near covering me with confusion. It was the knowledge of this doubt that induced me some days ago to support my story of the duck by giving several of my friends an ocular and satisfactory deimonstration of what the dog could do. To this end I summined them all into the pasture lot adjoining a rear field of a neighbor. I called the dog, get my gma and just a few minutes before the sun went down fired at a dove that was flying by. I did not want to kill the bird, so I just shot a few feathers from its tail. The feathers dropped into my neighbor's field and I clambered over the fence, picked up the feathers lying on the grass and brought them to the dog. The minute should be succeeded in the feather should be succeeded in the feather should be succeeded in the feather should be succeeded in the things, wanged his tail, looked into the air with a knowing wink of his eye, and was off like a shot down the road leading to the harms. We all them went into the house to await developments and to have a lemonade. An hour later we heard a noise upon the front gallery, and upon proceeding here in a body we found the dog wegging his brush with a conscious air and a banch of six fine pullets by his side. I was astonished, and for a minute or two all I could do was to look, flavious and the way friends chucked by my neighbor as chicken run, and instead of my picking up the dove's feathers. I had really scooped a handful of feathers dropped by the pullets. Well, the laugh was on me, but the intelligence and accent of the dog were canclusively proven. What is now the state of belaware was put under Penn's government by the duke of York. Everything was done with ceromony in those days. When Penn got to Newcastle, in Delaware, its government was tennaferred to him in the following way: The key to the fort at Newcastle was delivered to him. With this he locked himself out into the fort and then let himself out in sign that the government was that the land with the trees on it belonged to him, a piece of sod with a twig in it was given to him. Then a porrninger filled with water from the river was given to him, that he might be lord of the rivers as well as of the land.

New Sheet Metal.

By a process which is carefully guarded, something new in the working of sheet metal has been produced, steel sheets are coated with aluminium. It is claimed that these are suspective to and more durable than glaim for many purposes fur which those metals are now generally used. The special advantages of such aluminimecoated sheets are stated to be that they can be worked and seamed without pecking; the coating, adhering absolutely to the sheets, can be considered, will resist the action of sulphurous guess, and can be leasted to a fuster equal to burnished silver or nickel. An absolutely smooth and evenly-covered surface is presented. Sirammerdam has written, and which is spoken of in Aristole.

The life of this insect does not last beyond four of five hours. It dies towards 11 o'clock in the evening after taking the form of a butterfly about six hours after midday. It is true, however, that before taking this form it has lived three years in that of a worm, which keeps always near the border of water in the holes which it makes in the mud.

The change of this worm in the water to an ephemere which flies is so sudden that one has not the time to see it. If one takes the worm in the water the hand cannot be taken away before the change is made, unless by pressing the worm slightly in the region of the cheat; by this means it can be taken from the water before the change takes place.

The ephemere, after leaving the water, seeks a place where it can divest itself of a fine membrane or veil, which entirely covers it. This second change takes place in the air.

The ephemere arrest sizeff with the point of its little nails as firmly as it can; it makes a movement similar to that of a shiver; then the skin on the middle of the back breaks apart, the wings alip out of their sheath, as we sometimes take off our ploves by turning them inside out. After this stripping, the ephemer's dependent special place in the air, and the surface of the water on the end of its tall, flapping its wings one against the other. It takes no nourishment in the five or six hours which are the limit of its life. It seems to have been formad but to multiply, for it does not leave its state of a worm mutil it is ready to deposit its eggs, and it dies as soon as they are denosited.

In three days time one sees appear and die all speces of ephemeres.

The people of Epinal tried to lynch the woman and the jury.

Feat of an Alhiele

A young college athlete at Richmond Hill, Long Island, saved two lives the other day by making a leap of six feet through the air and striking with his shoulder a man and a woman who stood on the edge of a railroad track, with a train almost on them. The shock threw them to the ground just over the edge of the track and barely in time.

High Bridges.

Germany's highest bridge is over the Wuppertlul at Mungsten, near Remscheid, back of Elberfeld. It is 300 feet high and 1,630 feet long, the central arch having a span of 530 feet. The only higher bridge in Europe is the Garabit viaduet, 405 feet high, in southern France. The Mungsten bridge was opened for railway traffic as July 1.

The animal was the terror of the neighborhood.

Not that he ever hurt anybody. He wasn't much bigger than a pint of a cider for one thing, and I don't believe he ever meant any real harm.

But he used to bark at everything that came down the pike.

"It didn't matter how big a dog was, if his front paw was thicker than my whilfet's whole body, the little fellow would be out after him fightin' mad to all appearances. Of course the big dog wouldn't tackie anything so small as Tought-hat's what we called him—so he always came away thinking he had won. Same way with people. No body had the heart to kick, though he richly deserved it many a time.

"But it was when the circus parade passed the house that he met his match. Of course, he began to bark the moment the procession cane is sight, but he seemed to know that the biggest hings had not arrived yet, and he saved up most of lise energies until the elephants a part of the biggest dephant. Tarheel Intelligence Jolted.

It is told that a young farmer of western Burke county wrote to the state board of agriculture for information regarding some part of his farm work, and the board replied by a typewritten letter. This made the young farmer mad, he taking the typewritten letter as an insinusation that he could not read "pen and ink writing." He immediately sent the letter back to the department, with a message to them not to send him any more "printed letters," that he could "read writin" yit."—Morganton Herald.

A Great Traveige.

A Great Traveier.

That a rolling stone may, some-times, gather moss appears from the fact that a guard on the Great West-ear railway, in England, has just been given a purse of 100 guiness for being the greatest traveler in the world. His journeyings back and forth have amounted to 4,000,000 miles in 40 years. This beats the Children of Larsel.

EARLY MORNING CONCERT.

Flat Dwellers Have Fun with an Up-to-Date Cit,

Flat Dwellera Have Fun with an Upto-Date Ct.

In a certain flat in this fair town of ours, says the Cleveland Pfain Dealer, there are a half dozen families and several ringle gentlemen. It is a nice flat, as llats go, but it can tavoid some of the defects that inher to the flat family. When the herd of the household on the second floor comes in attwo in the morning the other flat dwellers are usually made aware of the fact. When the baby on the third floor cries—which it dowsn't do very often—the rest of the human beehire is always painfully slive to the shrillness of the vociferations. In addition to these slight drawbacks, and a few others, the flat is a good deal like flats of the better class. Yeople who have lived in flats know just what this means.

ple who have lived in flats know jus what this means.

One morning a single man whrooms in this particular structure was awakened from a troubled dream As he slowly came back to conscious ness a shrick of wild agony rang upor his ears. He sat up in bed with a start. Again came a blood-curdling yell, a yell which died away in a low reluctant moan. The single mat dropped his head back on his pillow "D—sah that catt" he growled. But the cat wouldn't be dashed. It a most beautiful feline crescendo it voice arose and fell, but principally arose. Presently the young mat also arose. As he moved acroes the room its said with the poked his head out of the window. The castern sky was streaked with the glory of the dawn. The air was clear, and as he looked up toward the eaves above his head he could see the yellow eyes of the night disturber glaring down at him. He glanced about his room for a suitable weapon. There was mothing portable that he desired to renonnee except the soap. So he fired three cakes of it at the warble without effect, and the awful voice went up and down the scale, and the yellow eyes glared unblinkingly.

Presently he heard a light shuffling noise in the yard below. He looked down and there was a roomer in slippers and a pajama looking for ammunition to hurl at the eat. He had a straw hat in his land, and he filled this with lumps of coal and pebbles, and then, taking aim from the best point of vantage, he unloaded his battery on the foe. The coal cracked against the brick will and thumped on the blinds, but the cat bore a charmed life, and its voine rose high and clear above the din of the melec. With every shot the young man at the window praverfully sped the missile, but his prayers were unheeded. Then there was a sound of opening shutters all along the rear of the flat, and heads popped out here and there across a dozon window sile.

"The job is yours," said the man in the yard as he dexterously flung a half brick within a half inch of the feline nose.

"Ha-a-wa-e-c-e." howled the cat. "Great Sectt" roared the hears.

in the yard as he dexterously flung a half brick within a half inch of the feline nose.

"Ha-a-wa-e-c-e." howled the cat.

"Great Scott!" roared the hoarse man, 'why dou't you annex her?"

"I'll break her neck, sir,' muttered the man in the yajama as he shied a piece of coal against the water pipe.

Then the romantic young woman on the second floor appeared at the window in a lovely negligee garb.

"Poor pussy," she called in a high-pitched soprano.

But the cat answered her with such a volume of what sounded like squere-toed profanity that she hastily withdrew.

For two hours or more the cat held the fort, and then some unknown hero clambered up the attic stairs and dislodged her.

Such is life in flats in the heart of a great city.
